THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION (IPU) IN PUTTING AN END TO THE BLATANT HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS AGAINST THE ROHINGYA MINORITY IN MYANMAR

Explanatory memorandum submitted by the delegation of Kuwait

For many decades the Rohingya Muslim minority has been subject to the worst types of discrimination and ethnic cleansing. In the 1982 Citizenship Law, the authorities in Myanmar denied the Rohingya minority the right to citizenship.

The Rohingya minority in the Rakhine State were the victims of systematic persecution and violence that resulted in more than 450,000 persons being forced to seek refuge in neighbouring Bangladesh. The estimated number of persons that have lost their lives due to the mass exodus caused by the violence is more than 1,500 individuals.

The IPU Statutes stress the importance of consolidating international peace and security, protecting of human rights and standing united against any threats to those principles.

Based on the foregoing, we request the inclusion of this item in the agenda of the 137th IPU Assembly.
