

INTERNATIONAL DAY OF DEMOCRACY

Your Parliament: Working for you, Accountable to you

Parliament exists to represent and serve the people, to listen and to speak for them.

Parliament is stronger when the people are fully informed, understand its work and see it as welcoming and accessible.

Parliament should aim to be representative of those who elect it – a reflection of the people.

At the heart of the relationship between parliament and the people are trust and accountability. Parliament must show it works in the public interest.
